

INDONESIA AUSTRALIA BUSINESS WEEK 2015

Indonesian Trade Mission in November 2015 a Success

Gerard Murray Pacific Urethanes Technical Director visited Jakarta in November as a member of the largest Trade Delegation to Indonesia led by the Federal Minister for Trade Andrew Robb.

The Indonesian economy has tremendous potential for growth over a broad range of industries including agriculture, tourism, health services, infrastructure, education, premium food and beverage, automotive components and resources and energy.

Important new contacts were made arranged by Austrade Jakarta with high level Indonesian decision makers in the oil and LNG industries. These new contacts will contribute to Pacific Urethanes growth in the Indonesian market in the immediate and long term.

A 21st Century Solution for the Building Industry

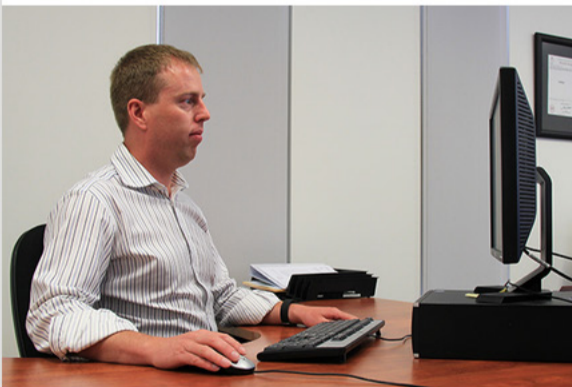

The Australian Construction Panel Market comprises a number of sectors including Structural Insulation Panels (SIPS) for engineered load bearing systems for walls and roofs, cool room panels, internal wall and ceiling lining for commercial projects, portable and modular buildings, external cladding and facades, and specialty panels such as fire doors and insulated plasterboard.

The versatility of these products provides numerous cost effective solutions for Architects and Designers who are searching for new technologies for their building designs.

As the Australian Construction Panel Market continues to evolve, Pacific Urethanes remains at the forefront, developing new polyurethane technology to assist our customers keep up with and ahead of regulatory code changes. Recent changes to the fire codes are gradually driving the market away from traditional foams towards higher performing PUR and PIR technologies.

Through our global network, Pacific Urethanes has developed specialised solutions for customers in the construction panel market.

Pacific Urethanes has the capability to assist with machine sourcing, installation and commissioning, through to advanced customised polyurethane formulation and applications development

Introducing our New Commercial Manager - Peter Lloyd

Pacific Urethanes has recently appointed a new Commercial Manager.

We are pleased to announce that Peter Lloyd has joined the company and will be responsible for our business in Victoria, NSW and Tasmania.

Peter has a degree in Chemistry from Swinburne University, and a post graduate degree in Business from Melbourne University.

He has over 15 years' involvement in the chemical manufacturing industry including the industrial coatings sector. This included problem solving customer application issues as well as streamlining production batches through the manufacturing plant.

Peter's commercial experience involves managing clients such as Amcor and Visy. In addition to direct account management, Peter has also managed the Victorian sales and operations teams for a local chemical manufacturer.

We welcome Peter to the team and look forward to introducing him to our growing list of customers in the near future.
